Edgerson Gives Reason for Not Agreeing With Board Decision

Edwin O. Edgerton dissented with the majority in granting the eight hour day with salary increases to the Carmen of the east bay region and presented the following statement as his reasons for dissenting:

"The serious harm to the men, the public and the company, which will result from the decision of the majority makes it impossible for me to acquiesce therein.

"On the uncontradicted evidence presented to the Board of Arbitration this award will practically wipe out the entire net income of the company.

"The net income of the company, after taxes, and not including bond interest, for the first six months of 1925, was $388,000. Estimating a like amount for the remaining six months gives approximately $776,000 for the year 1925. The evidence shows that this award will cost approximately $720,000 per year. To put this award into effect, therefore, for 1926 would mean that the company would not earn its bond interest. It also makes it impossible for the company to obtain money to carry out its program of improvement and betterment of service as the sale of bonds for this purpose can not be made with sufficient revenue to pay interest.

This presents a profoundly serious situation. The directors of this company have an obligation of service to the public, an obligation of living wages to its men and a written obligation to its bondholders to pay interest on money loaned.

"This award makes it impossible to discharge all these obligations. Of course if it were necessary to increase wages to give men a living wage this would be a paramount obligation and the others must give way; but this award does not give the men increased incomes but merely more leisure. The men will not be permitted to increase their income by working overtime because the penalty of time and one-half is so severe that the company will be compelled to employ additional men rather than work their existing force overtime.

"The big increase of hourly wage from 58 cents to 75 cents for the Key Division men and from 56 cents to 70 cents per hour for the Traction men is made for the purpose not to increase the income of the men but to maintain their present daily wages with shorter hours. The majority of this Board has evidently concluded that the evidence does not justify any increase of daily wages because these wages are not increased, but remain as they are.

"The only possible relief in this situation lies in a substantial increase in street car interurban fares. This means the entire burden of this award must be passed on to the public. The street car and interurban rider must pay more for his service, not to give the platform men more wages, but merely more leisure.

"There is no evidence presented to this Arbitration Board from any source that the present hours worked by the men resulted in overstrain or suffering of any kind.

"The unfortunate effect of this decision is to deprive the men of increased income and actually as to some of them, decrease

CURRY WANTS UNIFICATION OF DEFENSES

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—With announcement that he had completed the drafting of two bills designed to revolutionize completely the entire national defense and would introduce them when congress convenes next Monday, Congressman Charles R. Curry, Republican of California, today fired the first shot in what promises to become a great fight between a powerful congressional group and leaders of the American military policy over aeronautics and national defense generally.

The greatest desire of Curry is the abolishment of the secretarships of army, navy and supplying instead a secretary of national defense. The other would completely unify military aeronautics and place far reaching authority in the secretary of commerce to regulate commercial aviation.

In its major particulars, this new proposed legislation contradicts recommendations of the Morrow air board, which President Coolidge appointed to investigate the air conditions of the country and which has returned a report opposing Colonel William Mitchell's views. It is understood that the President would back the recommendations of his own board.

Curry's bill would place the aviation on a par with the army and the navy, but would subordinate all present military officials to one civilian secretary, who would be a cabinet member.

BANDITS TAKE CASH AND CAR

OAKLAND, Dec. 3.—Two negro bandits trailed E. C. Hammond from his place of business at 915 Franklin street shortly after 11 o'clock last night to a lonely spot beyond Lake Merritt, held him up, robbed him of $90 and took his car, a coach.

Hammond said when he closed his store he noticed a car following him steadily and when he reached East Tenth street, near Lake Shore avenue, the other car drove alongside and forced him to stop.

Both negroes were armed and they ordered their victim to throw up his hands. They then relieved him of all his money and the machine. One bandit got into Hammond's car and drove away, while the other, warning Hammond not to make a disturbance, jumped into the bandit car and disappeared.

Local Woman Has Narrow Escape in Santa Fe Wreck

Narrow escape from death was experienced early yesterday morning by Mrs. Lillie McMicken, 807 Macdonald avenue, Richmond, when the Santa Fe passenger train in which she was riding was derailed at Legrande, near Merced.

The extent of Mrs. McMicken's injuries were a few superficial cuts about the body and arms but her babies J. P. Jr. aged 3, and Billy Joe, aged 9 months who accompanied her escaped without injury, according to a dispatch received here by J. P. McMicken, her husband. Mrs. McMicken was enroute to Lublock, Texas, where she intends to visit relatives. She will continue the trip, instead of returning here. She was treated at Fresno.

The Santa Fe train was Chicago bound and had left Richmond at 3 a. m. yesterday morning. At first the train crew could attribute no cause to the accident, but later the officials of the road declared that it was caused by a wheel hitting a protruding frog.

Although four cars, carrying over 100 passengers, left the rails, only two women and two children besides Mrs. McMicken were injured. The physicians who rushed from Merced to the scene reported that bruises and shocks were the extent of any injuries.

Grand Jury Fails To Take Action in Frank Davis Case

Frank Davis, traffic officer, stationed at Albany, will be able in the future to go his way in peace.

The Contra Costa County grand jury yesterday, after deliberating on the matter for several hours, failed to return an indictment against Davis, who was accused of clubbing Fred Schultz, a buckeye farmer, over the head with a billy club.

District Attorney A. B. Tinning, who was present at the investigation at Martinez, said last night that the grand jury evidently decided that the matter was a case for the Alameda county authorities, as the incident occurred in that territory. It is said that the jury stood seven for prosecution and seven against prosecution.

Davis is alleged to have made the attack on Schultz several months ago. Davis chased Schultz through Albany and after catching him was said by the victim to have handcuffed Schultz and then beat him over the head with a billy.

Tinning said that another factor in the decision of the grand jury was that the evidence in the case was conflicting.

Famous Annulment Suit Is Nearing Finish At White Plains

HAS TAKEN FOUR WEEKS

Dramatic Scenes Mark Climax Of Suit Filled With Sensations

By JOSEPH HULVANEY

(By Universal Service)

WHITE PLAINS (N. Y.), Dec. 3.—All the elements of old-fashioned melodrama marked the closing of the Rhinelander annulment case in White Plains court today. Isaac N. Mills ended ten hours summation for Leonard, the husband, in an outburst of oratory. Alice, the colored wife, went, her aged mother broke down completely, and her father fought to reach the veteran attorney who was slaying the whole Jones family.

When order was ultimately restored, Supreme Court Justice Morschauser offered to end the four weeks of litigation by delivering his charge and sending the case to the jury at once.

Counsel on both sides consented but the jurors declared they would prefer to wait until tomorrow.

Despite warnings of criminal proceedings, threatening letters in large numbers came to court, counsel and principals during the session.

Justice Morschauser characterized them as insulting and contemptible and cautioned the jury against reading them.

The Morschauser charge should be concluded by 11:30 tomorrow morning. Motions by attorneys for both sides will probably take up another hour, when recess for luncheon will be declared. The jury is expected to begin actual deliberations at 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

COAL SCHOOLS

Chairman Berry of the New York State Coal Commission is offering to establish soft coal schools or "demonstration rooms" in every borough of the metropolis, with experts in charge to demonstrate how soft coal may be burned in stoves, furnaces and fire places; how to start soft coal fires and how to keep them going.

This seems to have been made necessary by the reluctance of New York citizens to substitute soft coal for the anthracite which is becoming so high in price and so scarce because of the strike.

It is easy to sympathize with every one who dreads adopting soft coal for regular use. Under the best conditions it is not a clean fuel.

On the other hand such demonstrations ought to be welcomed. Along with learning how to use the soft coal properly, a good many ignorant householders, janitors and other fire-builders would learn a number of useful things about the scientific side of heating systems. Women as well as men ought to know more than they do at present about proper fire-building, smoke prevention and elimination and economy.

MOTOR TAX CUT

The congressional proposal to cut the federal tax on motor cars from 5 per cent to 3 per cent is hailed with joy by nearly 20,000,000 automobile owners. It pleases especially the prospective owner of a new car, for this tax applies on purchases. The motor car manufacturers have all pledged themselves to pass along the saving to their customers. This should mean an average saving of $16 to $20 a car.

In view of the fact that automobiles are subject to more taxes, especially in Arizona, federal and state together, than any other form of property, a very good argument can be made for abolishing this federal tax altogether, thereby benefitting the average automobile purchaser to the extent of $40 to $50.

Perhaps the finest thing, however, about the proposed reduction, is the manufacturers' pledge of good faith. This example is one that might be followed more generally in industries benefitting by federal tax remission.

Old Home of Jefferson Davis Site of $2,000,000 Hotel

BEAUVOIR HOME OF JEFFERSON DAVIS

CHICAGO—Beauvoir, the former home of Jefferson Davis, stands on the same plot of ground between Belmont and Gulfport, Miss., the Illinois Central, as U. S. Senator Pat Harrison said in a recent address at Gulfport, "will link with bonds of steel and friendship the homes of Abraham Lincoln and Jefferson Davis."

The old home of the man who guided the destinies of the South during the Civil War is now a part of the Home for Confederate Veterans maintained by the Daughters of the Southern Confederacy. Overlooking the Gulf of Mexico, it stands today under its pine and moss-draped live oaks just as it was when Jefferson Davis bought it in 1880. Here with his wife and Winnie Davis, his daughter, he lived until his death and here he wrote his memoirs. His estate originally included nearly a thousand acres and the Chicago company has acquired 100 acres of this land as the site for its hotel with golf course, yacht club and other recreation facilities.

A $2,000,000 seawall being built along the twenty-six miles of continuous bathing beaches between Biloxi and Pass Christian will pass the old Davis estate and on the filled-in land back of it will be a twin concrete motor boulevard with parked space in the center beautified with flowers and palm trees.

Mrs. Housewife Becomes a Banker

SAY he is a Banker and at once a woman thinks of a lousy man of affairs and perhaps envies him a little. Her work seems so monotonous. Just the same old thing day after day. Go to market, come home and prepare the food, only to see it quickly disappear if she has been in the preparation.

Yet if she wishes, she may become a Banker herself. Her market is the concrete one seen as cans of food, bags of rice and bars of soap found in the grocery store, and if she knows values she can save herself time and money by skillful marketing methods.

If she goes to the same stores regularly, the grocer begins to watch for her to tell her of special values to be found on special days. Also in buying canned food he will give her three for less, or a reduction on a case. And if she is a regular customer he will often break or mix a case for her, so that she does not have to tie up all her month's dessert budget in canned pineapple, in order to save by buying a case at a time. She may get any assortment she may wish, as six cans of asparagus, corn, pineapple and tomatoes, and also get the benefit of the reduction.

Rice can be bought and kept in glass jars with tight lids. Soap if bought by the dozen is cheaper and saves the time consumed in going or sending for more. And, as every good housekeeper knows, it lasts longer if put away on the shelves to dry out.

One clever housekeeper simplified her banking and at the same time kept books very accurately by the following simple method: she took a piece of cardboard eight by twelve inches and divided it into portions, tied a long string to a pencil and fastened it to the pad. This she hung over the kitchen table. When she bought a case or half a dozen cans at a saving she listed them on the card along with the price she paid for them. But at the same time in another place she listed the regular market price. As she took a can from her shelves it was but the matter of a moment to make a straight mark opposite the listed can of food used. Reference to this list showed at a glance

And in spite of its slightly repulsive appearance, Connemara appreciated the tribute he had paid her. She stooped to pet him, to look into his fond hazel eyes and thank him properly.

"You are probably the nicest dog that ever was," she estimated, "and undoubtedly the funniest-looking. You look like—let me see—the biggest of all the Christmas tree dogs at Wanasak's department store, the kind that costs sixty-three dollars and nobody ever buys."

He must have understood her, for by the sad drooping of his head she knew that he was hurt. She leaned to take him in her arms and speak to him, heart to heart.

"Dear Bugle," she began, and stopped short. Tied neatly around his neck in a scrap of oilskin was a small package of surprisingly mysterious appearance.

"Shall I, Bugle?" she asked, all a-flutter with this new and sudden development in the plot. "Shall I open it?"

Bugle made it very plain that she should and smiled benevolently when she untied it from his neck. Kneeling before him, she turned the mysterious package aimlessly in her hands. The simple thing, the natural thing, would have been to unwrap it. But what if it should contain a human finger, or, worse still, a pair of ears?

However, since the first package she had opened had contained nothing more terrible than chocolate, she took heart. It might be breakfast bacon.

Bugle kept his experienced eyes on her as she unwrapped it. Inside was an envelope, carefully folded over; and inside that lay the fifty grand!

It couldn't be; she was dreaming; she was drunk. But she was neither. There it was. The fifty crisp one-thousand-dollar bills which that frightful creature had given her on the ferry one exciting evening, long ago! And there was no doubt, when she compared them closely, that the square scrap of oilskin exactly fitted the ragged gap in the coat she was wearing.

Connemara thought very fast, which she always did when she thought at all.

"We must bury this, Bugle," she said, and she knew she was right by the way he smiled and wagged his tail.

"Dig, Bugle! Dig deep, old dear!" cried she. But for an instant he failed to understand; then she scooped up a handful of earth and he caught her idea immediately. Taking over the job, he started digging a fine, deep trench.

"Perhaps his vocabulary isn't very large," mused Connemara, "and that's no doubt because he doesn't know the right sort of people. But he's intelligent without being pedantic. And that counts for a lot in a situation like this."

As she reloaded the banknotes in their envelope and tied the last knot around the fateful package Bugle stepped aside to indicate that the hole was ready. She dropped the parcel in its little grave and together she and Bugle covered it with sand. Tamping it down with her little silver slipper—now, alas, so sadly soiled—she wondered when she could come safely back and get the money, and what she would do with it when she got it. Then...

What was that? A twig crackled behind her. A branch rustled. A masculine throat, delicately barytone in its timbre, cleared itself tentatively.

Turning, she looked into a man's eyes—the nicest, clearest, cleanest, sweetest, manliest, bluest eyes she'd ever seen. She hadn't realized they were so blue last night.

"How—did you get here?" she asked faintly.

CHAPTER XIV

Frank Craven.

By Frank Craven

Lacy stood at the edge of the beach, looking at Connemara, who lay peeping out from under the much-too-large yellow oilskin.

"Where's McTish?" called Lacy.

"I don't know," replied Connemara weakly. "I lost him last night in the swim."

"I hope he's all right," Lacy frowned. "I have been up and down the shore for quite a stretch, and there isn't a sign of him."

"Is that all that interests you? You men certainly do stick together. Here you find me washed up on the beach with nothing to wear but a cold stiff, clammy raincoat. You could hardly call it a usual situation, and yet your first concern is McTish. I suppose my plight means nothing to you."

"Of course it does, but really the natural question was—"

"The natural question," interrupted Connemara, who suddenly realized she was getting a certain amount of warmth from this burst of indignation, "was to ask if I was comfortable, and if there wasn't something you could do for me."

As a matter of fact, this was the first time it had occurred to her. Had Lacy been too solicitous of Connemara, the chances are she would herself have been concerned about McTish, even sent Lacy looking for him. The man who can guess them right can beat the races.

"Well, since you have shown me the right thing to do, is there?"

"Is there what, Mr. Gallant?"

"Anything I can do to assist you?"

"Well, you might tell me where I could get some clothes—dry ones."

"I have a small farm about five miles down the shore. If you think you have the strength, I can promise you not only clothes but food and drink."

SYNOPSIS

Connemara Moore, finding herself late at night aboard a mysterious yacht in Long Island Sound, had plunged overboard and swam to shore. In the water she was joined by the faithful dog, Bugle. The two lay on the beach and while Connie slept Bugle disappeared, to return with a man's oilskin coat—for her. It has been a night of strange adventures, which started when Connemara stole away from Aunt Clementine's Connecticut home rather than announce her engagement.

A pair of leather gloves. Worn, but very swanky. "Two pounds in Jarvis Street," computed Connemara, who knew her London—"that would be something like ten dollars before the exchange went down." He must be rich. Or frightfully extravagant. "We'd be very congenial," she thought.

Reaching into another pocket, her hand felt something hard, cylindrical, and smooth. She started to pull it out, then started back nervously. Perhaps it would hurt her. Dynamite was shaped like that.

And if it were dynamite it would explode as easily in the pocket as in her hand. She might as well get it over with. Gingerly she pulled it out.

"Milk Chocolate!"

Oh, what a man, what a man! Someway, somehow she'd find him. And she knew she'd adore him. And if she adored him, he'd just have to adore her. She opened the chocolate.

"But, oh, maybe, he's married!" she thought as she bit into one of the beautiful, brown, round, life-sustaining slices. "And if he is—"

She didn't decide what she'd do then, for Bugle came crashing through the sage.

"Morning, old dear!" sang out Connemara, honestly delighted to see him again. At that thought she laughed out loud, for she had never seen him until that moment. And what an extraordinary-looking beast he was. Tall, and broad and big like a mastiff, but with short, curly hair, piebald black and white.

As he leaped toward her, she saw that he was bringing something more in his useful mouth. To her vague disappointment, it was not the morning paper, which he laid at her feet, but a huge and rather dirty bone.

And in spite of its slightly repulsive appearance, Connemara appreciated the tribute he had paid her. She stooped to pet him, to look into his fond hazel eyes and thank him properly.

"You are probably the nicest dog that ever was," she estimated, "and undoubtedly the funniest-looking. You look like—let me see—the biggest of all the Christmas tree dogs at Wanasak's department store, the kind that costs sixty-three dollars and nobody ever buys."

He must have understood her, for by the sad drooping of his head she knew that he was hurt. She leaned to take him in her arms and speak to him, heart to heart.

"Dear Bugle," she began, and stopped short. Tied neatly around his neck in a scrap of oilskin was a small package of surprisingly mysterious appearance.

"Shall I, Bugle?" she asked, all a-flutter with this new and sudden development in the plot. "Shall I open it?"

Bugle made it very plain that she should and smiled benevolently when she untied it from his neck. Kneeling before him, she turned the mysterious package aimlessly in her hands. The simple thing, the natural thing, would have been to unwrap it. But what if it should contain a human finger, or, worse still, a pair of ears?

However, since the first package she had opened had contained nothing more terrible than chocolate, she took heart. It might be breakfast bacon.

Bugle kept his experienced eyes on her as she unwrapped it. Inside was an envelope, carefully folded over; and inside that lay the fifty grand!

It couldn't be; she was dreaming; she was drunk. But she was neither. There it was. The fifty crisp one-thousand-dollar bills which that frightful creature had given her on the ferry one exciting evening, long ago! And there was no doubt, when she compared them closely, that the square scrap of oilskin exactly fitted the ragged gap in the coat she was wearing.

Connemara thought very fast, which she always did when she thought at all.

"We must bury this, Bugle," she said, and she knew she was right by the way he smiled and wagged his tail.

"Dig, Bugle! Dig deep, old dear!" cried she. But for an instant he failed to understand; then she scooped up a handful of earth and he caught her idea immediately. Taking over the job, he started digging a fine, deep trench.

"Perhaps his vocabulary isn't very large," mused Connemara, "and that's no doubt because he doesn't know the right sort of people. But he's intelligent without being pedantic. And that counts for a lot in a situation like this."

As she reloaded the banknotes in their envelope and tied the last knot around the fateful package Bugle stepped aside to indicate that the hole was ready. She dropped the parcel in its little grave and together she and Bugle covered it with sand. Tamping it down with her little silver slipper—now, alas, so sadly soiled—she wondered when she could come safely back and get the money, and what she would do with it when she got it. Then...

What was that? A twig crackled behind her. A branch rustled. A masculine throat, delicately barytone in its timbre, cleared itself tentatively.

Turning, she looked into a man's eyes—the nicest, clearest, cleanest, sweetest, manliest, bluest eyes she'd ever seen. She hadn't realized they were so blue last night.

"How—did you get here?" she asked faintly.

CHAPTER XIV

Frank Craven.

By Frank Craven

Lacy stood at the edge of the beach, looking at Connemara, who lay peeping out from under the much-too-large yellow oilskin.

"Where's McTish?" called Lacy.

"I don't know," replied Connemara weakly. "I lost him last night in the swim."

"I hope he's all right," Lacy frowned. "I have been up and down the shore for quite a stretch, and there isn't a sign of him."

"Is that all that interests you? You men certainly do stick together. Here you find me washed up on the beach with nothing to wear but a cold stiff, clammy raincoat. You could hardly call it a usual situation, and yet your first concern is McTish. I suppose my plight means nothing to you."

"Of course it does, but really the natural question was—"

"The natural question," interrupted Connemara, who suddenly realized she was getting a certain amount of warmth from this burst of indignation, "was to ask if I was comfortable, and if there wasn't something you could do for me."

As a matter of fact, this was the first time it had occurred to her. Had Lacy been too solicitous of Connemara, the chances are she would herself have been concerned about McTish, even sent Lacy looking for him. The man who can guess them right can beat the races.

"Well, since you have shown me the right thing to do, is there?"

"Is there what, Mr. Gallant?"

"Anything I can do to assist you?"

"Well, you might tell me where I could get some clothes—dry ones."

"I have a small farm about five miles down the shore. If you think you have the strength, I can promise you not only clothes but food and drink."

Yes, this is a precocious age. Any son nowadays can give his father good advice, and any daughter can tell the whole family what to do.

Santa Claus Makes Debut At Marcus Inc.

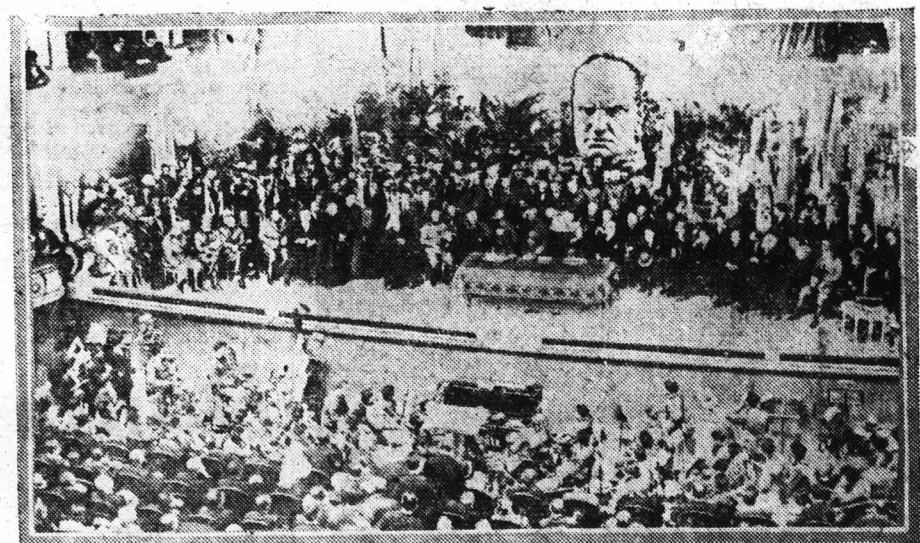

Perhaps the cold snap that was felt in this city yesterday was brought in by Santa Claus, when he arrived here from the north at the Harry Marcus Inc. Department store to greet over one thousand eager kiddies of this city. Rumor has it that he has his reindeer stabled somewhere on the outskirts of the city, but so far no one has been able to inveigle him to tell just where they are located.

Rosy of cheek and of ample proportions, old Santa gathered the happy children on his knee and told them how glad he was to see them and asked them to write their letters to him so that he would know just what to leave when he made a visit down their chimney on Christmas eve. All doubts of the children who have no fire-places were cast away and each and every one of them is counting the days until Christmas. Santa will receive letters from all children at the Harry Marcus Inc. store every day between the hours of 2 and 5. All letters should be sure to have the name and address on them so the jolly old fellow will know where to deliver the toys.

Each of the thousands or more children that visited Santa yesterday, was presented with candy from the jolly old saint.

entered his home and stole a hat valued at $25. Although the house was completely ransacked the hat seemed to be the only article that struck the thief's fancy.

Mr. and Mrs. William Adams, who have been visiting in this city since Thanksgiving with their daughter, Mrs. John Bell of Mira Vista, have returned to their home in Merced.

Harmony Asset in Modern Dairy Shows in Increased Milk Output

CHICAGO—Harmony has become recognized as an asset of value in dairies. Breeders say it is the equivalent to pleasant working conditions in factories.

Cows are little milk factories in themselves. Sunny pastures, pure water, clean barns, all contribute to a bovine psychology that makes for felicity. Cows must be happy to give good milk and plenty of it. Harmony of music has recently been tried in dairies. Phonographs have been introduced, and, according to dairymen, music has produced a noticeable reaction in increased milk production. Cows are more or less lyric. They are the animals that put the moo in moo-sic. Everybody knows that when a trio of goodfellow cows get together they make the old barn rafters ring.

In towns and cities the cow's personal representative is the evaporated milk can. Product housewives keep a herd of tin-can cows on the pantry shelf at all times. They milk them with a can opener. By this method they always have on hand a plentiful supply of milk, for the evaporated product is simply fresh cow's milk sterilized in containers and with 60 percent of the water removed.

The male cow, otherwise known as the bull, is shot all over the U. S. without apparent injury to the bull. But stirring up cows is dangerous. The happy music of cows means good milk.

"Kentucky Pride" Film Attraction At California

J. Farrell Macdonald, who attained his full measure of screen greatness as Corporal Casey in "The Iron Horse" considers himself fortunate to be cast in so appropriate a role as that of "Mike Donovan", the horse trainer in "Kentucky Pride", the William Fox supreme attraction which comes to the California Theatre starting today.

Mike is just such a two-fisted tender-hearted Irishman as Corporal Casey, and the new role fits Macdonald like a glove. "Kentucky Pride" is all about horses. It is the life story of Virginia's Future, a royally bred filly as told by herself. It was Mike Donovan who presided at her birth, who broke her to halter who saddled her for the first time. She was the apple of his eye, destined to be the next "greatest race horse." And finally it was Mike who taught her "to run straight and fast," in which rule of conduct the clean Kentucky pride finds its best expression.

Just as she was about to win her first race, fifty feet from the wire, Virginia's Future fell and broke her leg, thereby ruining not only herself but her owner, who had bet on her the remnants of his dwindling fortune. Evil times came to both, especially to the famed filly, until at last she became the chattel of a brutal peddler, who abused her unmercifully. Then it was Mike who discovered her, rescued her from her bondage and rode her to the track just in time to see her daughter, Confederacy, win a thrilling race, and redeem the family fortunes, equine and human.

It is a story that wrings the heart at times and Mike Donovan fairly divides sympathy with the luckless Virginia's Future. One hardly knows which to pity more, the limping, uncomplaining filly or the loyal Irishman who makes her sorrows his own. Humor, of the genuine "Corporal Casey" brand, bubbles forth in time to save many a situation.

Other features on the same program include "The Peacemakers," a Helen and Warren comedy; "Varieties," "International News," "Junior Californians" (evening only) and Indoor Radio novelties with Larry Canelo at the organ. Saturday matinee special "Kiddies" program.

GERTRUDE ASTOR AND MALCOLM WAITE in "KENTUCKY PRIDE" A WILLIAM FOX SUPREME ATTRACTION.

Buck Jones Star In Film Showing At The Richmond

"Durand of the Bad Lands," the William Fox production starring Buck Jones, now at the Richmond theatre for two days starting today, is a colorful fast-moving drama of the great Southwest, in which hard-riding, quick-shooting men and captivating, heroic girls play important parts.

The plot centers around a "bad man" of the "Bad Lands," which is enough to insure plenty of action and thrills. Buck Jones plays the "bad man" role, so it is safe to say he isn't beyond redemption, especially when the heroine (Marion Nixon) comes into his life.

An excellent cast is to be seen in support of Jones and Miss Nixon, including such well-known names as Malcolm Waite, Fred De Silva, Luke Cosgrave, Carol Lombard and George Lessley.

Other features on the same program include "Shoes" one of O. Henry's most interesting comedy stories; "Felix Trifles With Time" a Felix the Cat comic.

New Records for California's WORLD WINNING "Gasoline of Power"

Frank Elliott, Harry Hartz and Fred Comer, first three drivers to finish in this year's final and fastest speedway event—Culver City's 250 mile Thanksgiving Classic, November 29th, were all exclusive users of the "Gasoline of Power."

World's records were smashed throughout the race, and Elliott's phenomenal average of 127.86 m. p. h. is the fastest time ever made by an automobile for this distance. Richfield's almost unbelievable list of speedway victories and stock car records extending over a period of five consecutive years is conclusive proof of genuine superiority and is not even approached by any other gasoline in the world.

In the past month alone, seven other important new AAA records were established with Richfield gasoline.

VISITORS BEAT S. O. NO. 1

The second game of the evening although not so tight, was probably the fastest of the evening. At the end of the first half the score stood 7 to 7, but in the last half the First Presbyterian cagers of Berkeley forged ahead of the Standard Oil Tenth, No. 1, and won out by a score of 20 to 15.

The visitors came with a strong team well versed in its pass work and defense. The local boys tried with all their might, but were slightly outclassed.

Following are the lineups and the points scored by each man:

Presbyterian—Hays, f. 1; Lindquist, f. 6; Cox, f. 1; Van Post-ram, c. 12; Dickie, g. 0; Elder, g. 0.

Standard—Hutton, f. 3; Peters, f. 2; Bonham, c. 5; Fitzpatrick, c. 0; Vargas, g. 2; Huzefka, g. 3; Paasch, f. 0; Cozine, g. 0.

LA MOINES AND ELECTRIC CAGE TEAMS PLAY TIE

Playing one of the best games ever seen in Richmond, the La Moine Drug company quintet and the Western Electric company five of Oakland tore through three extra five minutes in their game.

Roosevelt gym last night in a desperate effort to break a deadlock. Finally the game was called with the score standing 18 to all.

In the last few seconds of the regular game the teams broke into the tie and in spite of all endeavors of either team in the three extra periods neither team could break into the lead. At the end of the game the score was 12 to 12 and each team made one basket apiece in each of the three extra periods.

From the outset the teams were evenly matched and it was evident that a close game could be played. The floorwork and passwork of all ten men was excellent throughout and although the men began to tire under the extra heavy strain they kept up the good work for the entire time.

The lineups and scores of each man were as follows:

La Moines—Healey, f. 1; Kirley, f. 4; Strain, f. 0; Fanning, c. 8; Pittsford, c. 2; McLaughlin, g. 0; Nichol, g. 0; Moore, g. 3; McCaully, g. 0.

Western Electric—Fling, f. 3; Atkinson, f. 0; Rathjan, f. 6; Lambor, f. 7; Sinder, c. 0; Greaves, g. 2; Painter, g. 0; Fraser, g. 0.

STRONG TEAM IS BEING SENT BY SANTA ROSA

Richmond Has Fastest And Lightest Team Seen at The School in Years

FIRST GAME STARTS 7:30

Ed Reserves of School Serve Supper to Visitors Before Game Starts

Santa Rosa high school is sending two basketball teams of unknown, but of supposedly great strength to Richmond to play the Union high school cagers at the school gymnasium tonight. Coach Ivan Hill's Unlimiteds and Harry Sander's 130 pounders are in the best shape, it was announced at the school yesterday. This is the official opening of Richmond's season.

Although extremely light, the local quintets are faster and better passers than any team seen in the school in years. The eyes for throwing baskets have not quite gained the maximum of perfection yet, but Hill reports that they are coming along.

Before the game at 6 o'clock, the Girl Reserves of the school will entertain the visiting teams at a light supper. The 130 pound team will go on the floor at 7:30 o'clock and the big game of the evening will be at 8:30 p. m.

Coach Hill announced the lineups of the local teams yesterday as follows:

Unlimiteds—Tony Santella, Paul Villalobos, Lowell Dyer and Marvin Gray, forwards; O. Johnson, H. Johnson and Marvin Clark, centers; William Gaudoni, Chas. Thompson, Ernest Barbieri and William Milicevich, guards.

Midgets—William Abbey, J. Hosking, C. DeBiere and Swenson, forwards; Frankie and Rioridan, centers; Richmond, Bowman, Tietmore, Schroeder, guards.

On next Wednesday night the Richmond cagers will troop to Martinez where they will play their second game of the season. It is doubtful if Rowdy Dyer, star forward, will be able to play during these two games as he is slightly laid up with a strained ankle. Rowdy stopped too quick in practice this week and gave the injured member a twist.

Complete new outfits for the team have been ordered and Coach Hill announced that in all probability the fives will blossom out in them tonight. The uniforms will be the same style as those of previous years, with navy blue and red, the school colors predominating. The outfits are complete from the shoes up.

Wanted, — A Bucket of Snow

These six pretty Florida maidens will see snow for the first time in their young lives, if you will send them a bucket of it to their home city, Daytona Beach. Judging from this huge thermometer on the Ormond-Daytona Beach Speedway, they would not have much time to enjoy it for it shows that the average yearly temperature is 71 degrees. It was constructed by the chamber of commerce to show the fine all-year climate and will greet the Northerner as he steps from the Florida East Coast train.

SPORTS

WEST NOT REPRESENTED

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Without a doubt the Pacific Coast has at least two of the greatest football players in the country, Ernie Nevers and George Wilson. In spite of this fact the All-American pickers in the East are practically ignoring the West in their selections. The men proposed for the All-American are invariably from east of the Rockies.

TWO RECORD HOLDERS

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Red Grange of Illinois and Eddie Tipton of Colgate ended their collegiate football careers this season, holding records that have never before been equaled. Tipton entered Colgate before the freshman rule had been instituted, so he has played four years. He has a total of 350 points scored, or nearly a hundred more than Grange made.

OAKS SEEK CHANGES

A great change in the infield of the Oakland ball club is expected before the season opens next year. This was hinted yesterday by Del Howard, business manager and Carl Ewing, president. This pair left for the East yesterday in the search for some stars and is expected that they will return with some winners, who will put the club on the map.

RED MAKES 100 YARDS

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 3.—One hundred yards in all were gained by Red Grange in the professional football game played here yesterday, between the Chicago Bears and the St. Louis All-Stars. The longest run Grange made in the game was 34 yards on a returned punt. Earl Britton, former fullback of Illinois, made his debut in professional football in the game.

SAINTS PREPARE

The sun came out yesterday, so did Slip Madigan's Saint Mary's football squad. They are preparing for the final game of the season, that with the Fresno Teachers' college next Saturday. This game will decide the championship of the Far-Western conference. The Saints will play with a disrupted backfield, as some are feeling the game with Santa Clara.

Judge to Give Charge to Jury This Morning

pleaded in impassioned tones in his closing argument for Rhinelander.

Leo Parsons Davis, counsel for Alice, interrupted with:

"Give her a chance by calling her a fraud."

"Yes, yes," pleaded Mills. Give them both a chance. They can never live together in matrimony."

Mills' outburst followed his reading of a letter from Leonard to Alice in which Rhinelander declared he "would go into the gutter" if she left him.

"He was her slave," asserted Mills. "There is something in a man who could unbosom himself like that."

"Defense counsel has said the Rhinelanders have ruined the Jones family," continued Mills. "Did the Rhinelanders put those girls on the sidewalks as 'pick-ups'?"

Referring to the "Spanish Kid" letter in the correspondence between Alice and Leonard Mills said it was calculated to plant in Rhinelander's mind the idea that Alice was thought to be Spanish and was associating with white people. That was the idea of the reference to Al Jolson, the comedian, Mills said.

Mills alluded to the Bible in attempting to uphold Rhinelander's testimony.

"There are four witnesses to one of the greatest events in human history—witnesses to the crucifixion, death and resurrection," he declared. "They are Matthew, Luke, John and Mark. Their accounts differ and yet can we accuse them of perjury or lying?"

"Rhinelander was a truth witness. He spoke frankly and honestly about those two terrible letters."

"He said he didn't think there was anything unusually bad in them—and he don't deny writing them."

George Jones, father of Alice threw the courtroom into a furore, at one point in Mills' summation, when the Rhinelander counsel referred to Jones as "a negro hack driver."

"You—" exclaimed Jones. "I never was a hack driver and I won't be called one."

Davis, Alice's counsel jumped to Jones' chair and roughly shook

British Beauty Movie Manager

By Universal Service

LONDON, Dec. 3.—The beautiful Mrs. Richard Norton, one of the reigning beauties of the Mayfield, who is the first British woman to assume control of a cinema—following in the footsteps of Gloria Gould of America—today said:

"I want to tell the public—the world of my pleasure at being appointed by Lord Ashfield and by William Jury as manager of the New Gallery Movie in Mayfair."

"My primary duties will be to advise in the selection of pictures to be shown out patrons, and to consult regarding the presentation of them. Frankly, I shall merely use my judgment as a movie fan—but that's a great responsibility, isn't it?"

The Honorable Mrs. Norton is not unknown in America. When the Prince of Wales journeyed to New York on the Berengaria, she was one of his party, and one of his favorite dancing partners.

Ourselves and Industry

Who Are the Real Producers?

By E. E. Lincoln and W. O. Scroggs.

Producing wealth means a great deal more than merely "making money." The professional gambler "makes money," but he produces no wealth. What he gains, somebody else must lose, and the world at large is consequently poorer rather than richer because of his activities.

Again, when we speak of a man as a producer we do not necessarily mean that he has created something where nothing existed before. We cannot create new matter. We can only give new forms to material, change its place, protect it from damage, and keep it until it is needed.

When we do these things with the purpose of satisfying human wants we are producing wealth. Every body, then, engaged in a useful occupation is in one way or another a wealth producer.

Perhaps we can bring out this principle more clearly with an illustration. A fish swimming in the sea satisfies nobody's wants. No man in his right senses would try to buy or sell such a fish, but when it is caught and hauled safely aboard a boat the situation is completely changed. The fish then becomes a form of wealth; it is then capable of satisfying men's wants. When the fisherman made this catch he produced wealth. He did not, however, produce a fish; he only changed the place of one.

Again, the fish gained still more wealth-producing power when it was brought to port. A second change of place thus resulted in a further increase in wealth.

From the waterfront the fish was taken to a more accessible market, where it was packed in ice. Then it was sent to a restaurant, where it was cleaned and kept in a refrigerator until some customer ordered fish for dinner.

In each of the steps between the fish and the dinner table something was added to the power of a commodity to satisfy wants, and its value was consequently increased. Every body who had anything to do with these various operations was a producer. He was adding a bit to the world's wealth by changing the place on the form of a thing, and keeping it till it was needed.

The principles noted in this simple case hold true also in the most highly complicated operations of modern business and industry.

Manufacturers produce wealth by changing the form of raw materials, so that they will satisfy a greater number of wants. Railroads produce wealth by changing the place of goods—by moving them to points where they are most wanted. Merchants produce wealth by laying in stocks of goods in advance of their customers' needs and keeping them till they are wanted.

It is sometimes said that labor is the only real producer of wealth. But modern industry requires much more than a pair of willing hands. Somebody must save. Machinery must be made and installed and raw materials must be bought before our labor can produce a sufficient quantity of goods to make civilized people reasonably comfortable.

Wages, also, must be paid even before the products are sold and even though they may be sold at a loss. Without the cooperation of other producers, therefore, and without the constant use of the products of past labor, the work of all of us would be very futile and ineffective, and the advantages of modern civilization would be unknown.

The real producers are those who add something to the sum total of human satisfaction. One man may do this by chopping wood, while a second man does it by writing a poem, and a third by managing a great railway system. — Western Electric News.

fire to them. The jail, an old wooden structure, without attendants allowed the fire to gain headway and the inmate's life was in danger, until some ingenious citizens hitched chains to the building and tore it apart.

The prisoner was taken to the hospital, where he was treated for burns and was given a cot. He got up during the night, blundered through the laboratory and smashed a score of bottles.

He finally escaped and departed for parts unknown. Authorities are making no effort to discover where those parts are located.

Thugs Attack Sleeping Man

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 3.—

While he slept in his room, 45 Sixth street, in the heart of the business district, Thomas Gim-mell was today seized by robbers who severely beat and robbed him. One of the bandits escaped and one was captured.

The capture was made by Louis Smith, pawn shop owner, at 43 Sixth street, who grabbed the thug as he attempted to flee. The bandit gave his name as Dave Ryan, 33, but denied any knowledge of the holdup, although he was identified by Gim-mell.

Gim-mell told police that the pair broke into his room while he was asleep and before he could arise, they set upon him and beat him into semi-conscious condition. They then rifled his clothes, taking $310 in cash and a $2000 diamond ring. The valuables were found in Ryan's possession following his capture.

Gim-mell managed to stagger to a window and shout down to Smith, although he had a deep cut in the head.

Without the cooperation of other producers, therefore, and without the constant use of the products of past labor, the work of all of us would be very futile and ineffective, and the advantages of modern civilization would be unknown.
